

8

9

10

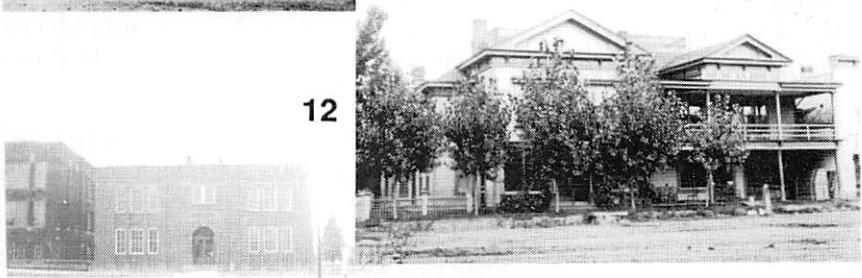

11

13

12

13

1. Third Ward Church, 1912 to 1969, Main Street
2. Pea Cannery, southwest section
3. Jail, 1878 to 1962, behind courthouse
4. Courthouse, 1878 to 1962, Main Street
5. Heber Mercantile, Main Street
6. First Central School, 1890's to 1923, Main Street
7. Winterrose Funeral Parlor, Main Street
8. High School, 1912, Main Street
9. Power Plant, 1909 to 1988, north of Heber
10. Old Mill, 1890, Mill Road and Center Street
11. Main Street about 1920's
12. Seminary Building, 1925, Main Street
13. Duncan Hotel, 1885, Main Street

High school was established in 1908. Before that, students were only educated to the 8th grade. The high school was built in 1912. The City Park is now at that location.

A telephone exchange was set up in the home of Charles Alexander in 1901 and served 12 telephones, mostly to doctors and professional men.

Work on Provo Canyon Road was begun on June 6, 1858. A bridge near the mouth of the canyon was completed by October, 1858.

Teenagers dragged Main Street in horse-drawn cutters. Racing and cutting shiners was their favorite winter sport.

In the early days of Heber, gypsies would come and camp along Sixth South. They would drive into town with a big span of horses and wagons and camp for awhile. They canvassed the town begging for money and food and told fortunes to the townspeople.

An early school house called Sleepy Hollow School was located on the quarter block of 200 West and 300 South. As late as 1906-1907, high school subjects were taught there to about twenty students.

The Indians, on their visits to Heber, camped on the open ground of the Clyde farm, (where the high school now stands) and engaged in races, games and competitions of physical skill.